RECTOR'S FAREWELL SERMON. Rev. George C. Hall's Services Cease in

Honesdale. Special to the Scranton Tribune HONESDALE, Pa., Jan. 29.—Probably no congregation ever mourned the de-parture of its rector from among them more deeply than does Grace church, Honesdale, upon losing its beloved leader. The deep regard in which Rev. George C. Hall is held by his people was plainly shown at his last services f yesterday.

In the morning Mr. Hall repeated a ormer sermon by request. The substance of his sermon forcibly brought out the fact that man must be pitted against man to bring out the best that s within him, as iron sharpeneth irou Every pew in the church was filled, and a large part of the congregation attended the last administration of the Lord's Supper by its rector, It was a parting that caused tears to flow, but the bitter was yet to come.

The affection between the Sunday school and its leader is very close. Two hundred and fifty seven scholars were present when Rev. Mr Hall arose to speak his last words as their rector. The scene was touching in the extreme. It was with difficulty that Mr. Hall spoke; it was no use to keep the tears back longer; even the men wept. The WE HAVE now open and on sale the newest and most desirable Child," and the parting benediction the building of the present noble edi-fice. A short sketch of its life, and lastly, Mr. Hall's own rectorate was referred to. The church and Sunday school have grown wonderfully during Mr. Hall's eight years' ministration. The growth of the Sunday school has been the growth of the church. From an average attendance of 130 eight years ago it has increased to 220, and the past eight weeks has shown an av erage attendance of over 230.

Mr. Hall could not and would not say farewell. He said that the only separation would be in his official relation. The last words were spoken in a trembling voice, and the congregation sang, "Bless Be the Tie That Binds." No rector and his congregation ever felt a parting more keenly than Mr. Hall and his dearly loved flock.
